The Capital PC User Group Users Helping Users A Virtual Community Since 1982

The Capital PC User Group, Inc. (CPCUG), is an all-volunteer 501(c)(3) nonprofit educational support organization for users of personal computers. Established in 1982, CPCUG provides a forum for PC users – from novice to expert – to share their experiences with computers and learn from each other. Whether at our monthly General Meetings, at a meeting of one of our Special Interest Groups, or in one of our many workshops, seminars, or training classes, you can find answers to your questions, exchange information, learn from experts, and explore the continuing and exciting advances in microcomputer hardware and software.

The best answers to questions about PCs come from users who are excited about the growing power of computing devices. And that's who you meet when you join CPCUG. Some of our members are experienced professionals who seek fellow professionals or comparably knowledgeable individuals to discuss on-going developments in the computing field. Many members are not experts, but are beginning or average users who seek help in dealing with their home or small office computer systems. All of these computer users come to the various meetings and events to get unbiased views from top professionals, who come from nearly every arena of this constantly changing field to share their expertise and answer our questions. The computer users also come to help and be helped by other users, gain useful insights into many aspects of computing, and to learn to better use and enjoy their computers,

How can I tweak my operating system so that programs run faster and better?

What do I need to know when buying a new computer?

Which web browser should I use?

What's a good word processing program?

What is a firewall?

What's new in software?

How do I protect my computer from viruses?

Which software package will work best for me?

How do I get on the Internet?

How can I get honest advice about computers?

Where can I find others who share my interests in computers?

The Capital Personal Computer User Group (CPCUG) can help you find the answers you need to aid you in getting the most out of your computer. Whether you use a computer that runs Windows, Linux, OS/2, or other operating system, you can find people in CPCUG who share your computing interests or can help you find answers to your computer problems.

The Capital PC User Group

has the help and support you are looking for!

The Capital PC User Group has a variety of features and activities that are of interest and value to computer users at all levels of expertise.

Special Interest Groups

Special Interest Group (SIG) events enable computer users to meet with others who use the same software or have similar computer-related interests, such as the Internet, statistics, investing, and computer consulting. The meetings are excellent forums for learning what works and what doesn't.

CPCUG currently has nearly 20 active SIGs, and new ones can be formed as interest for them develops; at least one is sure to meet your needs. Find out how to get more from your operating system and make productive use of the Internet. Learn to do such things as automatic formatting in word processing and graphics programs, setting up linked tables in your database program, or getting the most out of a wide variety of other programs.

Helpline

Need quick help with a hardware or software problem? With the CPCUG Helpline, your solution may be only a phone call away. The Helpline is a list of members who have volunteered to provide phone or e-mail assistance in their areas of expertise. Our Helpline is published regularly in the user group's Monitor magazine. This invaluable service is a perfect example of what our group is all about – users helping users.

Free Educational Seminars

CPCUG offers free seminars on a wide range of computer topics. Participants receive reliable information and timely advice from experts. Seminar topics vary from basic user instruction to advanced programming tutorials.

Occasionally, CPCUG presents its own popular and free seminar entitled "Before You Buy (or Build) a Computer." (The 100-page seminar presentation and reference slide publication, updated just before each seminar, is also available at the seminar for a small fee.)

Low-Cost Workshops & Training Classes

CPCUG offers a variety of low-cost classes (currently numbering about 80, with more under development) at two locations in the greater Washington, DC, area, on such topics as:

- ◆ Digital Imaging
- ◆ Home Networking
- ◆ Creating Web Pages
- ◆ Web Logs (Blogs) & XML
- ◆ Under the Hood
- ◆ Digital Video
- ◆ MS Word
- ◆ MS Office
- ◆ MS Excel
- ◆ MS Powerpoint
- ◆ JAVA programming
- ◆ C++ Programming
- ◆ Basics of Computers for Beginners
- ◆ Windows Maintenance & Troubleshooting
- ◆ How to Make the Most of Your PDA
- ◆ Job Hunting on the Internet
- ◆ Shopping & Auctioning on the Internet

The Monitor Magazine

The Monitor, the User Group magazine included as part of your CPCUG membership benefits, contains a wealth of computer information, practical tips, and hot industry news. Regular features include reviews of software and hardware products, reviews of books on different aspects of computing, reports on meetings and events, and columns addressing a variety of personal computing issues.

E-Mail Distribution Lists

If you own or have access to a PC and a modem, you can connect with yet another free source of information and advice: CPCUG's e-mail distribution lists.

The Capital PC User Group operates more than 30 public and private e-mail distribution lists as an extension to our monthly meetings. Here members share experiences and technical expertise. You can find information on the best prices and vendors for a particular product, get help with a software or hardware problem, or solve a programming dilemma. Questions and comments from any user – from beginner to PC wizard – are always welcome.

Internet Access Through CPCUG

CPCUG has its own Internet domain, cpcug.org. Internet access and e-mail accounts are extra-charge items, but different levels of accounts are available at competitive rates to suit the needs and budgets of members. Full Internet access is included with all accounts. Some types of accounts include shell access, of particular value to computer professionals.
